Brian Horn Uses Nitrogen to Win Clients and Uncover Held-Away Assets

How one financial advisor wins a high percentage of prospective clients when Nitrogen is brought up in the introductory meeting.

Background

Financial advisor Brian Horn has been in wealth management for 20 years. An industry veteran based in Portland, Oregon, Brian provides portfolio management, asset management, and financial planning. As a sole practitioner and federally registered investment advisor, Brian offers securities and investment advisory services through the trusted company LPL, which has a long track record of helping clients achieve their financial goals.

Enter Nitrogen

Brian was first introduced to Nitrogen by Waddell & Reed.

Even though Nitrogen was available and recommended by other advisors, Brian was unsure about the new software. He wanted to protect his long-lasting relationships with clients and maintain his commitment to providing clear, accurate, and accessible information. He also needed software capable of integrating seamlessly with his current tech stack.

“When I first looked at it, I was concerned that it might be gimmicky and not have much substance, to be candid with you,” Brian said.

He also didn’t know if Nitrogen was a platform that clients could access independently and how clients would respond to the Nitrogen name.

Brian didn’t take full advantage of Nitrogen’s software, opting to maintain his effectiveness with clients without risking a business disruption with a new and unknown product.

The Diversion

When Waddell & Reed was acquired by a new broker-dealer, Brian opted to use their free software package instead of Nitrogen. These programs did not help Brian gain prospective clients—in fact, they had the potential to hurt new business.

The software showed a very conservative rate of return that in Brian’s experience didn’t validate the amount of risk clients were taking. To Brian, these systems were also too time-consuming, requiring a lot of information with little return, not able to clarify information for his clients.

Brian knew that he would need to find another risk solution that cut through industry jargon and made risk conversations accessible and meaningful for the everyday client.

“It was pretty clear right away that I needed to get access to Nitrogen again.”

Enter Nitrogen — Again

Brian was looking for a risk solution, and his colleagues highly recommended he give Nitrogen another try. “Advisors at Waddell & Reed said Nitrogen was really great and definitely worth the money and effort,” said Brian. However, what ultimately pushed Brian to take the leap was Brian’s desire to show a client with a set portfolio a side-by-side comparison of where they were versus where they could be.

“It’s pretty easy to give prospective clients a nudge and explain to them how much money they could be saving with us. We’re investing in lower-cost products, our fees are lower, and we can have regular appointments to monitor success. That’s what the Nitrogen software allowed me to do.”

Brian knew that Nitrogen could provide this turnkey information. Along with its ability to create efficiency, build client trust, and garner new business, Nitrogen also enables advisors a streamlined and straightforward way to compare portfolios, show examples, and present to clients without over-complicated graphs or overwhelming information.

“It’s a really easy way to show straightforward charts and graphs, where you and the client have something to point at and talk about.”

Brian said that the “most impressive part” of Nitrogen’s software is the Retirement Maps feature that displays how clients’ money will grow over time based on their initial and monthly investments. Brian was also impressed by Nitrogen’s technology integrations. The ability to seamlessly integrate Morningstar codes and other managing models validated Nitrogen’s data for Brian.

“When I saw that Nitrogen seamlessly integrated outside data, that gave me confidence that I was accurately showing a client how much risk they would take on with my recommendations based on the software.”

Today, Nitrogen helps Brian clearly and accurately convey complex financial information to clients, building trust and winning new business. Nitrogen has been an ideal fit for Brian’s services, playing a prominent role in his business growth.

Coming Full Circle

Brian had a prospective client who thought she was paying a lot and not getting a lot from a different advisor. She was not pleased with her current advisor relationship. She is one of many prospective clients Brian has encountered, who are paying 1.5% or higher in fees to have their mutual funds actively managed through a model portfolio.

Using Nitrogen, Brian has helped them switch to his firm. Brian gained her trust by showing her straightforward data and reduced fees supported by Nitrogen. She not only decided to move her account over, but also her mom’s account which had significantly greater investments.

Nitrogen has positively impacted Brian Horn’s business in these 4 ways:

-  Accurate Analytics
-  Client Prospecting
-  Business Growth
-  Technology Integration
